Updates from OpenStax

David Harris, Editor-in-Chief at OpenStax

At OpenStax, David contributes to the team's effort of improving access to high-quality materials by working with authors, developers, and by supporting the emerging OpenStax ecosystem.

Faculty Textbook Heroes

Lorenzo Brancaleon, Ph.D., Associate Professor, Physics and Astronomy

Brancaleon has replaced the primary textbook for his sections of PHY 1943 with the free Introductory Physics from OpenStax, saving his students $18,690 each semester.

Crystal Columbini, Ph.D., Associate Professor, English

Columbini has replaced the primary textbook for her sections of ENG 4433 with content from Writing Commons, saving her students $1,488 each semester.

Rita Mitra, Ph.D., Associate Professor in Practice, Cybersecurity

Mitra has curated instructional materials and assessments from open access and library-subscription content for IS 1001, saving her students $20,720 each semester.

Luca Pozzi, Ph.D., Assistant Professor, Anthropology

Pozzi has led the effort to replace the primary textbook for all sections of ANT 2033 with content from History of our Tribe: Hominini, saving students $35,160 each semester.

Adopt a free textbook FACULTY GRANTS

*If you're looking for an opportunity to try out a free textbook in one of your courses, this grant is for you!

$1,000 individual faculty grants

$1,500–7,000 group grants

The high cost of textbooks is a reason students delay or discontinue their educational path. By using free, high-quality learning materials, UTSA can make great strides in higher education affordability for our students.

Adopt-a-Free-Textbook grants are generously funded by the UTSA Libraries and The Peggy and Taylor Eighth Student Success Fund.

APPLICATION DEADLINE: MARCH 18, 2019
